Town Could Supply Water Service

More than 25 residents of Grafton town and Blairmore road, suburbs of Coleman lying in Improvement District No. 10, met with Charles Drain M.L.A. and Mayor John Holyk of Coleman to discuss the low water situation in both these areas.

Residents in these two districts have applied to the town of Coleman to supply water to them from the town's reservoir.

Mayor Holyk advised the meeting that there was plenty of water in the town's system to look after the town as well as the two outlying districts.

Mr. Drain explained that he felt certain the provincial government would make money through a loan available for such a project. Estimated cost of the job would be approximately $20,000.00. The loan would be repaid through the levying of a franchise tax on the 35 to 40 residences involved.

A petition is to be prepared and placed in Kropinski's East Coleman grocery store for signatures of persons wishing this service. The petition must have more than 60 per cent of the names of those concerned. Residents in the area have until November 15, 1969, to sign the petition.

Editorial On FIRE!

(By A. E. Bridges, Alberta Fire Commissioner)

There is something new this year in fire prevention — not a magic eye to alert people in case of fire — we have had such a device for many years; but the trouble is most of us tend to keep our eyes closed to fire. This time it is a federal law — a new law — that in effect opens new fields in fire prevention and fire destruction control.

The reference is to The Federal Hazardous Products Act which received Royal Assent June 27, 1969. In essence the Act provides a way to prohibit the importation, advertising and marketing of hazardous products. Obviously, we have to care enough about the shocking fire waste in our country to want to do something about it; but I think we should use this law to the limit of its life saving potential, and here is how we can do it.

When we find products that are easy to ignite with a spark or flame and it appears there is a special danger in use or storage, they should be reported to the fire chief, the Provincial Fire Commissioner or to the Inspector of Hazardous Products appointed under the Act. Initially, the Act lists certain corrosive and flammable substances but certainly the present list is far from complete. It makes no mention of such things as flammable fabrics used for upholstery, rugs or articles of clothing, many of which have fast-burning and smoke producing characteristics dangerous to life.

Perhaps we have grown accustomed to hazardous surroundings but in the area of new social goals and human resources endeavors, there is a need for a revolution — a revolution against fire hazardous products — a revolution against the dangerous conditions that have been gradually encroaching upon us due to our sophisticated way of life and our modern technology.

Fire is still a deadly weapon and particularly so in the hands of the extremists in the mob, the criminal and the careless. Fires are easy to initiate; therefore, we need a new technology in fire control that will effect a dramatic reduction in readily available combustibles. It can be hoped that The Hazardous Substances Act may be applied successfully to cope with our serious fire problem. We must be alert to this new opportunity for better personal fire safety.

Ecumenical Training For Christian Laity

by Dave Hempling

In keeping with the ecumenical spirit of the modern Church, clergy and lay representatives of the various denominations here in the Pass have been collaborating and will be jointly sponsoring a programme of ECUMENICAL TRAINING FOR CHRISTIAN LAITY. Leadership training will be offered on an inter-denominational basis by Anglican, Roman Catholic, United and the Christian Reformed Churches with participants invited to select the AREA of study which interests them, rather than to join a denominational group.

Although preliminary plans have been laid to the point where something tangible can be offered now, nothing has been set in final form, and at the October 26th public organizational meeting, to which everyone is invited, any and all suggestions will be considered and the interest groups and seminar courses will be finalized. The projected list expected to be offered so far, includes the following seminar training courses:

Christian Education:

Led by an expert in Christian Education methods, who is a skilled worker with young people, this seminar will go into an examination of the basic methods involved in teaching Catechism, Sunday School curriculum, and most facets of Christian Education with all age groups. The interests of the group who sign up for this course will be taken account of, in setting the guidelines for the course. All Sunday School and Catechism teachers, (and those who may sometime consider teaching) are especially urged to consider this one!

Hospital Visitation:

Led by an accredited hospital chaplain and family counsellor, this seminar will deal with the dynamics of helpful hospital visiting. Some of our churches already have lay visitors going regularly to the hospital, and others are thinking of beginning. Here is a chance to learn the basic skills needed for this work, which include: listening with the third ear, the ministry of holding one's tongue, and creative use of prayer with sick persons.

Church History:

This seminar, to be led by a theologian well-versed in the history of the Church, will deal with a survey of trends which have characterized the Church's history from the beginning, and which are relevant today. The history of the Church, when studied dynamically, is capable of becoming a medium for tremendous discussion and a revitalized understanding of our frustrations and problems in the contemporary church.

Youth And The Church:

Here will be an opportunity to explore in depth the tension which exists between youth and the Church. A dialogue will take place between those involved in the generation gap, and this in itself will characterize the format of this seminar. Experimentation with new possibilities and full involvement by young people will be the main goals.

Contemporary Theology:

To be led by a modern theologian and ready to look with new perspective at such issues as: The death of God, theology, Humanistic Christianity and Religionless Christianity, for example, has provided a whole new climate of thinking in the modern Church, and this kind of radical enquiry will be welcomed in this seminar which is not meant for the most stodgy Christians.

Christian Worship:

In keeping with the times (ministers and priests not being the only ones who lead in worship services nowadays), there will be worship training for those who have been feeling a sense of need in this area of leadership, and for those who have stayed away from taking much part in leading worship because they feel totally un-equipped for it. Expert leadership will be provided for helping lay persons to use the resources available, such as Bible commentaries, service books and other materials useful for preparing to lead Christian worship services and give sermons. Attention will be given to contemporary music which is being used in the renewal of worship in all denominations.

World Religions:

This seminar will focus on other Christian religions, noting the differences between them, and looking into the basics of: Buddhism, Mohammedanism, Taoism, etc. One of the interesting features of "New Theology" in the Christian Church of the later 20th Century has been the influx of trends and influences from the Eastern religions, and the mysticism of the Orient. There has been a movement towards one another in all of the world's religions, and this seminar will examine this trend and attempt to answer some of the basic questions surrounding it.

SUMMARY:

For all persons who feel a need to revitalize themselves and/or gain further skills through study and discussion, the various courses offered through — Ecumenical Training For Christian Laity will prove helpful and stimulating.

The first organizational meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, October 26th, in the Isabelle Selson High School. Everyone is welcome.

— By Dave Hempling.

Recollections Of Early Days in The Pass

(By David Gillespie)

The Editor,
The Coleman Journal,
Coleman, Alberta.

Dear Tom:

I thought by reviewing a few of the outstanding events, some of them tragic, that happened in the Crows Nest Pass over the past 70 odd years, might prove interesting to your readers, and as an introduction I would like to draw their attention to a paper sent to me from Toronto by a grand-daughter two months ago.

This is a copy of the Rules and Regulations in effect in a Hotel known as the Macleod House in 1882, which would indicate that Macleod must have been a rip-roaring town 87 years ago.

With reference to the above, I came across this little article in the June issue of the Reader's Digest, a few weeks ago. It stated that Kamoose Taylor, whose Hotel Macleod, Macleod, Alberta, in 1880, was known all over the west and had very particular guest rules but there were only two rules not named in the above. "It states the Bar will be open Day and Night. Day drinks 50 cents. Night drinks $1.00. No mixed drinks will be served except in case of a Death in the family."

I suppose when one is dealing with events and happenings in the Pass, they should go back to the foundations when the Indians were in control. Having one to quarrel with them, they scrapped amongst themselves, and there are several landmarks at various spots in the Pass showing where they had, so when civilization was beginning to make itself felt in the Pass the construction of the Rail-way through Pass was in full swing and the big camp at the Crows Nest Lake composed mostly of French men and Italians, who when they got a drink of the poison they called whiskey in those days that was peddled to them, they were liable to start anything and generally did.

I wonder how many knew that Fernie was completely wiped out by a forest fire at the beginning of the century and again in 1904.

Coleman had just finished building their Opera House in 1882 and was intending to have an official opening, but the opening served a purpose never expected as it housed the refugees from Fernie for over a week and beds covered every available inch of space.

Coal mining was beginning to give indications at the turn of the century of the big business it later became, with mines being opened at Morley, some miles west of Fernie; Coal Creek, three miles east of Fernie; Michel, Coleman, Blairmore, Frank, Lille, Hillcrest and Bellevue, all of which, with the exception of Morley, which was closed down, produced 1,000 tons a day.

Sometime later, mines were opened at Beaumont, Corbin, McGillivray at Coleman; Mutz mine at Blairmore, Maple Creek, Police Flats, Burns, Passfield and Beaver Mines, but most of them petered out.

Then Coleman opened a mine at Vicary Creek, 15 or 16 years ago, some 12 miles north of Coleman. Some 20 mines altogether, but the demand for coal had dwindled to such an extent that only Vicary Creek, Michel and the new developments at Fernie are the only producers to stay and even those are depending on Japan for contracts.

The first disturbing note to interfere with the day's normal conditions was the Frank Slide which happened in April, 1903, at the little town of Frank in the Crows Nest Pass, when 500 feet toppled off the top of the Turquoise Mountain and buried the town to a depth of 50 feet and covered 1/3 of two square miles. It has had a few reasons attributed to it as the cause which seem far-fetched when looked at closely. To say that it simply fell or slid without some contributing cause is contradicted by the fact that rocks weighing thousands of tons are found so far away from the foot of the mountain and points nearer to the fact that some terrific power had been released and forced it on its way.

The fact that there is a perpendicular seam of coal inside the mountain and that they had been extracting the coal for some time which means that they were gradually working their way inside to the top of the mountain, which is reasonable to assume was causing interference over the mountain as a whole, or as any old miner would tell it: "It brings a creep on" again though only necessary to me as I have never been on top. I have been told there are deep crevices there and that it is most limestone. Every one knows what effect water has on limestone and a combination of forces from below and from the top may have had a lot to do with it.

Here is an interesting sidelight on the Mine Explosion. A rumor that was causing a great deal of uneasiness was to the effect that the force of the explosion had penetrated the barrier of the coal that was supposed to exist between the McGillivray Mine and the International Mine, as a measure of safety, which if true, would have made the International Mine unsafe to operate.

A meeting was held in the Mine Rescue car, which was attended by officials of both mines and the government mine inspector, Moses Johnston.

Teddy Royal was in charge of this.

Bill Hayson and myself represented the Mines' Unions. As she came to Canada in 1904, intending to make her home in Cranbrook, and that she was on the train that was held up by the Slide and that she was the only woman on the train.

The next event that made history was the Hillcrest Mine Explosion in 1914, when 200 men lost their lives. I was with four other men in the mine searching for bodies.

The first we came across, there was seven of them. To me they seemed to be Timber Factors, and they were lying as if they were asleep.

They had missed the force of the explosion, but were overcome by gas. The next we encountered, there were four in the group, and they were so black you could not recognize them. One of our party noticed that one of the victims had put on new boots that shift and swore he was going to have them. He was told in an uncertain manner, if he touched them there would be another casualty added to the list.

A man well known in Coleman then, seemed like Thomas and myself spent days in the mine searching for a man named Ironmonger. We failed to find him.

There was another explosion a short time later when three men lost their lives. It was on a Sunday or it might have been worse, as that was all that was in the mine.

When Alberta went on the Water Waggon (Freightline) around the Twenties, bootlegging became big business in the Pass, particularly Blairmore, where Picarelli of the Alberta Hotel was the King Pin.

The Mountie seeing the B.C. border was only a few miles away, put a Chain Block on the only road available at the west end of West Coleman, but it was ineffective as the bootleggers had pack horses and the trails over the mountains. Some one told Picarelli that the Mountie at Coleman named Lawson, had killed his son. Without stopping to find out if it was true, Picarelli and his mistress proceeded to Coleman, and shot the Mountie on the doorstep of the barracks. Picarelli and his mistress paid the penalty by hanging.

The next highlight was the holding up of the C.P. Railway train at Sentinel by four Russians around the 20's. Two were caught, one was shot at Bellevue as well as a Mountie, and one escaped to the south.

An incident in which I was innocently involved, was when one of the bandits was reported to be hiding on the Saskatchewan Mountain a few miles north of Coleman. The Mounties drove up in their car one night to within 50 yards of my home in Grafton Town and kept their lights trained on my home. Curiosity took me down to see what it was all about. When I got down I found a Mountie standing by the car with a gun trained on me. I nearly fainted.

The next episode to disturb the tranquility of the Pass was the McGillivray Mine explosion in 1926, when ten men lost their lives. The explosion occurred on the night shift, as there were fewer men in the mine and it was the only time they were allowed to blast. In addition to the danger from gas the mine was on fire, which added greatly to the risk with the result that they flooded the mine, directing a creek nearby into the mine. After that part of the mine, which was the lowest level, was flooded, it was left that way for some time to make sure that the fire would be out — then the water had to be pumped out. The main entry re-entered in order to get to the six men still entombed in the mine, but failed to make his inspection that morning, yet he signed his report that everything was OK.

Even that omission might have escaped notice had the miners used their safety lamp, but from where it was hanging it was obvious that they had not done so. That was the end of open lights in the mine. From then on every one used safety lamps. I knew the miners. Father and son named Grewcott.

It is exhilarating what tricks your memory can play. For instance — we had an explosion at Coalhurst around 20 years ago. Other than I know it happened, I cannot tell you a thing about it. We had another explosion three or four years ago at Michel when there was some loss of life, yet I am sure anyone knows as much as I do which brings me to what I want to say.

For the past 20 years I have been living between Vancouver, Kimberley, Coleman, Lethbridge and Neville. A few months at a time in each place, with the result that any records I had have been lost in moving around and I have been depending on my memory and finding it a poor substitute. I have lots of material, but find it difficult to separate it and put it into proper sequences and dates.

I am afraid I have done a poor job and should have realized I was too old to attempt it.

I suppose I should have something to say about Coleman since I looked upon it as my home town for 63 years, and still do. I have the men from No. 2 level together and led them safely to the surface, thereby probably preventing further loss of life. As it was three of the ten victims were lost on No. 3 level and one on No. 1 level.

Many will remember the Communists and the trouble they caused, especially in Coleman during and around the 1930's, when Harvey Murphy and his supporters from the Pass towns were the cause of a near riot which wrecked the Coleman Opera House and the aftermath that resulted in Murphy and quite a number of others appearing in the District Court at Macleod with Chief Justice Ivens on the bench.

It is not often that Drama and Comedy appear on the same stage and at the same time, but here is an instance. We had taken precautions that day to see that all known Communists were prevented from getting into the hall and our meeting, but as Burns says: "The best laid plans of mice and men gang aft agley" — in other words they don't work out as intended. Some got in and among them was one of the most prominent local Communists — when the meeting started I recognized him and he seemed to be more anxious to get out that he was to get in, and he was not using the same means to do so. The Door. He was jumping onto the stage and if there is any one familiar with the old Opera House they will know that there was a window at the back of the stage about 15 feet above ground. He took a dive, went through the window, taking it with him, and landed in the lane — not the easiest or safest way to get out.

A big Russian was there throwing his weight around, and Jimmy Anderson, who could use his fists, was trying to bring him to his level, but it was left to a Mountie who got into the hall to do so. He must have got his eye on the big fellow, walked toward him, and when a few feet away, took a run and landed with both feet on the Russian. He must have thought the hall had fallen on him. He went down and stayed down. The fight did not interest him any more.

Some more Mounties got in and cleared the hall.

A great deal of credit is due Mr. Tom Halliwell. He used to own and edit The Coleman Journal, and later owned and edited The Macleod Gazette — for the splendid support he gave the workers during that trying time, through his paper and for his criticism of the Communists and their method of doing business.

I feel honored at being considered a Friend of his.

An oversight on my part in overlooking the fact that a small explosion in the International Mine around 1910 in which three men lost their lives, required some comment. Up until that happened it was open lights that were used in the mine, but each pair of miners was provided with a safety lamp and expected to make use of it by examining their working place for gas even though the fire-hose had done so earlier when making his inspection. It would appear that negligence was responsible for what happened, not only on the part of the miners, but also with the fire-hose, who failed to make his inspection that morning, yet he signed his report that everything was OK.

Even that omission might have escaped notice had the miners used their safety lamp, but from where it was hanging it was obvious that they had not done so.

That was the end of open lights in the mine. From then on every one used safety lamps. I knew the miners. Father and son named Grewcott.

It is exhilarating what tricks your memory can play. For instance — we had an explosion at Coalhurst around 20 years ago. Other than I know it happened, I cannot tell you a thing about it.

A few months at a time in each place, with the result that any records I had have been lost in moving around and I have been depending on my memory and finding it a poor substitute. I have lots of material, but find it difficult to separate it and put it into proper sequences and dates.

I am afraid I have done a poor job and should have realized I was too old to attempt it.

I suppose I should have something to say about Coleman since I looked upon it as my home town for 63 years, and still do. I have many happy memories and a few sorrows, which has taught me to take the bad with the good. I have made many good friends, both Fraternally and Socially, which I value highly. I have many amusing episodes, especially with my part in helping to make arrangements for Burns' Anniversary Supper for many years.

Coleman has always been strong in sporting events and has won many trophies in soccer, tennis and hockey. Over the early years the miners were paid once a month always on a Friday — which meant that it was a lively weekend with much drinking and gambling.

As an instance of the lengths they were prepared to go, Dr. Little — the dentist — bet Dr. Oliver $100 he would buy a paper on the train at every station between Coleman and Calgary, and he did it. Up until a few years ago there was always three hotels doing business. Now there is only one, and at one time or another there has been over 25 grocery stores, men's wear, ladies' wear, butchers and other stores all essential to a growing community, and dependent on the two mines.

Now with no market for coal the two mines closed down. Hardly a store on the west side of Main Street. Coleman looks like a ghost town.

Here is an episode that I can laugh at now, but it was no laughing matter at the time it happened. It concerns the Communists after we got them under control. We had met the management, made a new agreement and arranged for the mines to open on the 2nd of July. I don't remember the year.

I had given Mr. Halliwell of The Coleman Journal, an order for some hundreds of check-off slips, and I had to have them in the hands of the time-keepers early in the morning of the 2nd of July, for every man to sign, authorizing the Union to collect dues.

Through an oversight on Mr. Halliwell's part he neglected to do so and went off to Fernie to the docks.

Tommy Holstead, the present editor of The Journal, was working for Mr. Halliwell then and I managed to convince him to print as many as I thought I would need for that day, but it was 11:00 p.m. before I got them, which meant I had to get up at six o'clock the next morning and take the slips over to Nobby Clark, the time-keeper at the International Mine, before 7:00 a.m.

The Communists, hoping to intimidate the men and prevent them from signing on, were holding a meeting in the K.P. Hall at that time in the morning, and someone must have seen me coming down the street and went inside the hall and told Murphy. He came out just as I was passing on the other side, and shouted to me, "You don't work at the International, Dave." I told him to do what I was doing. He wanted to know what that was. "Minding my own business," I shouted to him. However, it did not stop at that. I went on and delivered the slips and on coming back, they had lined up on both sides of the street, and I had to walk through. Later in the morning they were above the creek on the hillside throwing rocks down at the men on the way up to sign at the McGillivray Mine. They even had their women folk up the creek jeering at the men, but the Mounties, when they learned, soon stopped that.

The first fire in Coleman that I can remember was in West Coleman in the home belonging to popular miner Blaser. Had there been any wind it might have been serious, as it was right in the centre of the village.

Being late at night the fire provided the only light as there were no street lights in those days and it was hard getting around.

The first brigade was on hand, but there was not much they could do as there were no facilities to enable them to use their hose.

Frank Graham was the fire master, and he was running around with a lantern directing operations at the creek. Finally, it was decided to form a bucket brigade and a few of us were calling at the nearby homes collecting pails.

It was apparent that the home was doomed. The fence caught fire and in order to save a shed which housed a cow and some chickens, some one had the foresight of pushing the toilet over and dragging it clear to make a break in the fence. Old Frank came along with his lantern and not knowing what had been done, selected that spot for getting into the yard. Suddenly he disappeared and when they had located him, they had to take him to the creek as he was no longer fit company to have around.

It makes one smile when the fire brigade is mentioned. It continued in those days of an outside hand wagon with a long pole in the centre at the front. Motor power was formed by two firemen, one on each side of the pole pulling and two firemen at the back, pushing. The fire fighting equipment consisted of a few pails and shovels, a few axes and a few lengths of hose. What a difference today with the magnificent equipment they have. In these days the fire brigade consisted of volunteers — now, like most everything else, they are paid for their labor.

I wonder how many of the old-timers of Coleman remember the scene we all got when the compressed air line burst just at the entrance to the International Mine? Happily it happened in the day time, but it made such a terrific noise every one thought the mine had blown up. I would venture to say they heard it in Fernie. It lasted so long because other than shut the compressor down, they could not do anything until the line was empty.

This happened in the middle forties at the McGillivray Mine. The officials figured they had a lot of blasting powder that had lost its power so they empowered old Tom Parry to get it and take it to an isolated spot and blast it. That was all right, but the time selected by old Tom was all wrong. He selected the middle of the night and when the blast was set off it scared the wits out of everybody in town, because they thought one or both mines had gone up.

Transportation, especially with C.P. Railway, has never been anything to write home about. I remember the soccer team was due to play a game in Lundbreck. We got on a coach attached to a freight at 9:00 a.m. on a Saturday morning. We reached Blairmore, were pushed into a siding, while they did some shunting. Then they picked us up and we went on to Frank, where they went through the same procedure, but with this difference. They went off without us. Seemingly they had forgotten all about us. Some hours later another freight came along and picked us up. We all got into a freight car and finally reached Lundbreck in time to play the game. Imagine seven hours to travel 20 miles. But that is only the beginning as the show man says. We could not get home until Sunday morning with their regular train and had to put up at the hotel for the night.

Another time the Knights of Pythias decided to hold a picnic at Crows Nest. There was about 60 of us. We got on the regular train at 9:00 a.m. and arrived an hour later. We had Mrs. Teddy Eacott prepare lots of sandwiches and cake, ice cream and soft drinks for the kiddies, and we had the utensils with us to make tea and coffee, and soon we had a lovely meal ready.

It was a lovely autumn day. However, the people of Crows Nest placed their hall at our disposal and the days were beginning to shorten. We were glad to make use of it.

Having some good singers in the group as well as Mrs. Tom Badham and Mrs. Bob Holmes, who were excellent mimics and reciters, we soon had a good concert going and one by one we had the Crows Nest people dropping in until we had most of them. We had a wonderful time together. They thanked us for a lovely entertainment and gave us a hearty invitation to come back soon and they came to the train at 9:00 o'clock and saw us off after singing Auld Lang Syne together.

There are no such times like that any more.

*REC NEWS***

On many occasions I have mentioned that volunteers in the community form the backbone to any recreation program. As we experience a change in seasons, let me point out how you can and must become involved in program as activities change to meet the seasons.

Over the summer months, baseball was the main live of activity, and involved many volunteers as coaches and travel and equipment managers. I'll be the first to admit that facilities were at a premium in some cases and we look forward to bigger and better facilities next year. Baseball, however, is over and we must now look toward the winter's activity.

With Hockey, Boy Scouts, Junior Forest Wardens, Girl Forest Guards and other activities close at hand, no doubt our youngsters are eager to begin.

In addition to school work, young people have the potential to take on quite a load and do a pretty good job at all of it.

What happens, though, when these participants, eager and all ready for action, arrive and there isn't anyone to head up the team, to assist in organizing their plays or to call meetings or practices? What happens to this individual? Who's job is it to help youth and to assist youth when leadership is required? Who's job is it in fact to act as a leader in any area of community development?

The greatest resource we have is that of Human Resources. Who's job is it to participate as a leader to develop this resource?

In the case of youth, ours is the responsibility of assisting and guiding them to help themselves. In the case of adults, ours is the responsibility of participating to help ourselves and our neighbor. In both cases it's a matter of learning to accept the other person and a willingness to contribute to his well being.

How do you weigh this in respect to your position in the community as a potential leader?

Safety Belt Campaign In Alberta

The Alberta Safety Council is taking dead aim at a big bad habit—the widespread failure of most motorists to remember to fasten their safety belts.

In a first for this province, and probably for the world, the Safety Council is setting out to discover just how many do remember. With the help of local volunteers, a survey of safety belt usage will be conducted province-wide during the next four weeks.

Heading up local volunteers in the Crows Nest Pass is Lorne Crystal of Blairmore, who has organized the survey in this area. The survey will take place at various service stations.

Coupled with the survey will be a large scale public education program aimed at convincing motorists that safety belts are of no value if they are left on the seat.

As Lorne Crystal points out, the safety belts probably added $30 to the cost of the car. "That is cheap insurance, if it is used properly. The proper way of course, is to fasten your safety belt every time you get in the car."

Preventive Pointers

The senior citizens in Bellevue are showing themselves to be a lively, swinging group. After the initial meeting organized by the Preventive Social Service Program the Bellevue senior citizens have now formed their own group, and are planning a grand opening of their new club room for Thursday, October 16th.

The Senior Citizens' Club Room is located in the Bellevue Municipal building, and has been donated to them by the Bellevue Village Council.

The donations to help in furnishing the room are rapidly materializing. Already there is a TV set, a couple of chesterfields, several chesterfield chairs, a tri-fold lamp and various other items.

The room is a good size, however, and will need more furnishing to be brought up to an adequate level. If any one has chairs, chesterfields and tables, lamps, card tables, cards, crib boards, dart boards, etc., that could be donated to this Senior Citizens' Club would they please call this office at 564-4931 and transportation can be arranged.

An evening for the ladies is being planned for the near future, at which time a hair stylist, Mr. Mason, from Sharon's Beauty Salon, will conduct a program on the care of hair, as well as a hair-styling demonstration. Please watch for further notification of a date.

Anyone who has other suggestions for programs or who would like to assist the group in any way, is invited to give us a call.

For many years past, these senior citizens were the backbone and hard workers in our communities. Let's do our part now to help make their golden years as lively and enjoyable as possible.

1970 World Amateur Wrestling

To give greater significance to the selection of Edmonton as the site of the 1970 World Amateur Wrestling Championships, the Alberta Amateur Wrestling Association and the Recreation Branch, Alberta Department of Youth, have joined forces to sponsor a three-day instructor's workshop to be held at the University of Alberta, October 11 to 13.

The purpose of the workshop will be to prepare a core of competent amateur wrestling instructors who will return to their communities and organize wrestling clinics to train other coaches and officials. Head the impressive array of instructors will be Dave Auble of Lansing, Mich., a former Olympic medalist, along with Dr. Bert Taylor, coach of the University of Alberta team and Canada's national team; Alex Romanuk, president of the Canadian Amateur Wrestling Association and promoter of the 1970 World Championships, and Bill Manson, president of the Amated Wrestling Referees' Association of Canada.

The extensive three - day workshop will cover all phases of wrestling including elementary and technical holds, chain wrestling, teaching methods and officiating. As it is an attempt to promote wrestling throughout Alberta, applicants will be selected on a province-wide basis.

Dwight Ganske, Athletic Branch consultant with the Recreation branch is in charge of registration and applications and further questions or inquiries about the wrestling workshop should be directed to him at Recreation Branch, Department of Youth, Main Floor, C. N. Tower, Edmonton 15, Alberta.

Fire damage and forest protection costs Canadians $60,000,000 annually.

SINGALONG JUBILEE

Anne Murray (right) and Edith Butler are two reasons why CBC-TV is so optimistic about a new fall program Singalong Jubilee. Anne is a former physical education teacher and a regular on Singalong. Edith, an Acadian folksinger, will be making guest appearances throughout the season.

There comes a time in everyone's life when decisions have to be made, with which you are both happy and somewhat sad. Such a time has come for me.

This will be my last news column as I have returned to University to further my education. I look forward to this experience, yet I am somewhat sentimental in that I am leaving behind many good friends and acquaintances who first gave me a taste of their good old western hospitality.

You made me feel truly welcome and I thank you and I hope that we may meet again some time. I am sorry to say no new home economist has been appointed as yet, but we hope it will be soon.

However, if you do have a problem, please feel free to call or write my office and the secretary will, to the best of her ability, supply you with any information you may need which is available from my office.

Until then, my thanks and warmest regards to you all.

*REC NEWS*

Throughout the schools in the Pass this week a general registration for Minor Hockey is being taken. This is the second season now, that the Recreation Office is offering their services in taking this registration. We would like to urge each youngster to make sure his name is placed on the list and that a correct birth date is given.

Incomplete and inaccurate information, prolongs the process and provides for a great deal of additional work.

I would like to thank the principals and teachers of the Pass for their assistance last year and look forward to their continuing support.

Many people are probably wondering when the ice seasons will begin. At this point it would be fair to say that each arena in the Pass is heading for an October 15 opening date — that is, weather permitting. All arenas will be operating well before November 1st.

Figure skating will again play a very large role in programming over the winter months. Mrs. Radford, president of the Crows Nest Pass Figure Skating Club along with her executive has indicated their optimism and look forward to a great season. Miss Peggy Brown will again be club pro, and her qualifications as a skater and instructor will do much to enhance a good season.

It must be pointed out that figure skating is growing tremendously on a national scale and that many more skaters than ever before are taking up the sport. For many skaters, it costs a great deal to participate — actual figures are not available. For skaters in the Pass, the fee scale is as follows:

Beginners — $10.00
Intermediates — $15.00
Seniors — $20.00

These prices are a far cry from what it costs to belong to a club in the larger centres. For the youngsters of the Pass this is truly a chance of a life-time.

Smoking
In Hospitals
by A. E. Bridges
Alberta Fire Commissioner

Less than a year ago the Fire Commissioner called for a study to examine the problem of smoking in hospitals and nursing homes. The Alberta Hospital Association took up the theme and took the lead in arranging, regional meetings at which hospital administrators and hospital fire inspectors could attend. The Edmonton Hospital Fire Marshals representative and members of the Fire Commissioner's staff attended and lectured at these meetings on fire control practices. Result now is that hospital, nursing home and senior citizen home staffs are better informed on fire prevention regulations and upon fire evacuation safety practices.

The Fire Commissioner has had to record four deaths by fire occurring in hospitals and nursing homes during 1963, and one death up to this time in 1969. These deaths resulted from cigarettes, pipes and matches setting fire to clothing and bedding. It appears that where patient smoking is allowed even under restricted conditions, there are difficult supervision problems. One solution could be to provide the type of clothing and bedding for female handicapped patients that cannot be ignited by matches or smoking materials. According to our 1963 statistics on fire seven out of a total of fourteen hospital and nursing home fires were caused by careless handling of cigarettes.

The Alberta Hospital Association has set up a sub-committee to study the problems associated with smoking in hospitals.

Hunting Season
On Birds Closed

The pheasant and Hungarian Partridge hunting seasons are closed through the province of Alberta.

The Fish and Wildlife Division wishes to advise all hunters that the Hungarian Partridge seasons previously open in Upland Bird Zones 1, 2 and 5, are now cancelled.

Seasons on both birds are now scheduled to open November 1st, provided samples currently being analyzed are not found to be carrying high levels of mercury.

Other species of wildlife do not appear to be carrying dangerous levels of mercury and therefore the Grouse and Waterfowl seasons remain as originally scheduled.

Thank You!

I wish to thank each and every member of the Coleman Fire Brigade and Blairmore Fire Brigade who turned out and extinguished the fire encountered by one of my Texaco delivery trucks on Sat. Sept. 27. A special thanks to Mario Maschio who's quick thinking and alertness prevented a major fire. To Clay Gillis of Blairmore Sawmills Ltd. who authorized their tractor to pull the burning truck from the area near the plant storage tanks. To all of you and anyone else who assisted me, I wish to convey my heartfelt gratitude. Without your assistance a major disaster could have occurred involving both loss of life as well as property.

It is a wonderful feeling to live in a community where your fellow man will care enough in your crisis, to come out and assist you to a point of jeopardizing his own life.

Thank You
